Subject Matter

Warbird Digest is a feature based magazine. Our goal is to cover the people and machines of the warbird movement.

It is important to remember that we are not an aviation history magazine. Articles written for Warbird Digest should not include the history of the aircraft type. In other words, if you are working on article about a P-51 restoration, please do not include the history of the type within your article. We believe that the majority of our readers are well versed in the history of the more common combat aircraft. Articles about a particular airplane covered in Warbird Digest should include the history of that exact aircraft, not the type.

We are interested in features on recently completed restorations. Ideally these features will include multiple air-to-air photographs of the completed project.

Warbird Digest is generally not interested in publishing articles that are submitted to multiple magazines.

How to Submit Your Article

If you have an idea for a feature article for Warbird Digest, please contact the Editor to discuss the details. Electronic mail is the preferred method for communication.

Photographic and news subscriptions may be sent by electronic mail or other conventional means.

Photo Guidelines

Warbird Digest can accept all forms of photographs. Slides, digital images, or negatives are preferred. Digital images should be a minimum of 300 dpi and at the original size. Most file types are supported, but JPEG, EPS, TIF or PSD (Photoshop) files are preferred.

Prints can be utilized provided that they are clear and produced glossy. Matte prints are not acceptable.

It is the contributor's responsibility to obtain permission for the publication of any submitted photographs. Appropriate credit will be given.
